

I have heard rumors that the "No-Call" list may be changed or axed. This is a serious matter to me and to the economy in my mind. This is the first time I've had any power over the privacy in my home during dinner. I haven't had to pay for a non-published number and still have not had to get a cell phone to keep these vultures, (sales people), away. How many sales calls do government officials get while they are sitting at the dinner table? I've had them call and get me out of the shower early in the a.m. I am so opposed to any changing or discontinuance of the "No-Call" list that it may very well affect my voting choices. If everyone has to get a cell phone to avoid these obnoxious calls, what will happen to our phone companies who employ thousands of people. Why take a successful program and dump it in the trash? I just don't understand how the Federal Government can take an Indiana Program and do anything with it. I have observed, for years, the Fed's putting more and more responsibility on the States for taxes and various issues and thus things also get passed onto the counties. So why now take a state program that is helping Indiana people and change or axe it? Daily I feel bombarded with advertisement to the point of illness and when it comes to my home, that's even worse. I have actually told people that my number was on the list and not to call my house again. Guess what - it works. I cannot stress how important this to me and can only hope that you are getting the same requests from others. Please keep this in mind when you look at this issue now and in the future.

Regards, Christy Richards of Elkhart, Indiana